

Erin Tryon

I have lived in Albany county since 1996 and grew up on my family's 180 acre farm. I still live on the same farm with my husband and our children and our main goal is self sustainability as naturally as possible. Every year I garden 2+ acres with herbs and vegetables as organic as I can. I practice no-till and and work hard to keep my soil happy and healthy to help my garden thrive! That has led me to learn a lot about soil throughout my garden adventures. I also have honeybees and an extraordinary amount of flowers (mostly native), fruit trees, berry bushes, and a wide variety of farm animals. We try to balance the ecosystem here to keep everyone and everything as natural as possible with things like no-till, crop rotation and pasture rotation for optimal health of our soil.

We also run a greenhouse business (Jill's Greenhouse) in the spring providing vegetables, herbs, perennials and annuals to our local community.

I have been a grange member for 2 years and hold the position of Steward. I also have been active in 4H for about 8 years with my children.
